ATLEE POMERENE DESERVES RE-ELECTION

(Cleveland Plain Dealer)

No one familiar with the senatorial record of Atlee Pomerene can escape the conviction that the senator has shown himself to possess an admirable courage at every stage of his career. He has been a faithful representative of Ohio, a man with high ideals of public service who has considered his Americanism of more importance than his Democracy.

Mr. Pomerene was the last senator to be elected from Ohio by legislative vote. His selection by the assembly of 1911 came after a full discussion of his merits and a full appreciation of his character and talents. He had in 1910 been chosen lieutenant governor on the ticket with Judson Harmon and his quick promotion to the seat vacated by Charles Dick in the United States Senate was a recognition on the part of the people of Ohio, as well as of the legislative majority, that Mr. Pomerene's activities and attainments fitted him for the higher post.

His election to the senate was a popular selection through the state. He entered upon his duties at the beginning of the sixty-second congress just at the time when old reactionary control of the government was loosening its grip and progressive principles were beginning to make an impression on the national capital. The house had been won by the Democrats by the elections of 1910 and the senate majority had been reduced.

The six years of Mr. Pomerene's senatorial experience therefore, cover a period in national legislation characterized by vast progress toward democracy, toward a restoration of the processes of government to the hands of the people. In the constant skirmishes marking the progress of this fight the Ohio senator has stood bravely and consistently on the side of the common interest. He has neither compromised nor surrendered in any particular.

But the most exacting test of Senator Pomerene's right point of view came in connection with the problem precipitated upon congress by the European war. There has been no question as to where the senator would be found. He had stood foursquare to every hostile breeze that blew, grim for American rights and American honor, indifferent to what enemies he might encounter for his self so long as he remained true to his oath as a senator and true to his obligations as a loyal American citizen.

Senator Pomerene's unflinching Americanism through the trying period of the last two years may have won him some enemies. If so, he is honored by their hostility. If so, it becomes a pleasure for the loyal voters of Ohio to show their resentment of such un-Americanism by returning Mr. Pomerene to office by a handsome plurality.

President Wilson has found Mr. Pomerene one of his valuable aids in congress in the promotion of both his domestic and his foreign policies. This has never been a question as to how this senator stood upon issues involving national honor. He has stood firm at every crisis, an element of strength to the administration and an object of pride to Ohio.

Opposing Senator Pomerene in the present campaign is Myron T. Herrick, governor of Ohio for one term who was refused a reelection because of his unpopularity in the executive office. He is a banker, a man of wealth and the amount of money spent by him and on his behalf before the primaries last August has become an issue in the present fight. Mr. Herrick harks back to the Republicanism of Mark Hanna and Al Smith in his campaign for the senate. He calls for the "good old days" when campaign expenditures were unlimited, when tariffs were made by their "friends" and Wall Street enjoyed the privileges of a private line into congress and the federal treasury.

As senator Myron T. Herrick would take his place with Penrose, Smoot and Warren, composing a group of backward-looking members thoroughly repudiated at previous elections, thoroughly detrimental to progressive legislation and now fighting desperately for reinstatement to the seats of power.

Between Senator Pomerene and Mr. Herrick The Plain Dealer believes the choice is clearly in favor of the senator. He is every whit as able, is more experienced for the duties involved and far more dependable as a representative of the people of Ohio.
